Applicant: Girls Who Code

Project Name: Girls Summer Coding Camp

Location: Chicago, IL, United States of America (The)

Funding Request: 25000.0 USD

Project Overview

The Girls Who Code Summer Immersion Program (SIP) is a free, virtual, two-week intensive program for high school girls and non-binary students (rising 10th-12th graders) to learn fundamental coding concepts. The program aims to close the gender gap in technology by inspiring and equipping participants for computer science careers. Funding will support this program, which is an existing initiative.

Key Objectives & Activities

1. Inspire & Educate - Teach beginner to intermediate coding concepts through hands-on projects (HTML, CSS, JavaScript, Game Design, UX).
2. Career Exposure & Mentorship - Connect students with female role models, guest speakers, and industry insights through virtual classrooms sponsored by tech companies.
3. Build Community - Foster a supportive "Sisterhood" environment to encourage bravery, risk-taking, and persistence in tech.
4. Ensure Accessibility - Provide the program free of charge and offer need-based grants to cover student costs.

Expected Impact

This initiative aims to significantly increase the number of girls and non-binary individuals pursuing computer science. Measurable outcomes include alumni majoring/minoring in CS at 5x the national average, increased student confidence and skill gain, and serving over 50% from historically underrepresented groups. The program contributes to achieving gender parity in entry-level CS jobs by 2030 and addresses the tech skills gap.

Challenges & Considerations

No outstanding issues that could affect the organization's ability to operate or deliver services were identified. The project has secured 40% of its total program budget from other funders.
